

- manage your wine collection
- thousands of tasting notes
- community of wine enthusiasts

Start FREE Trial

Home | Members | Subscribe | Guided Tour

The Independent Consumer's Guide To Fine Wines

Topic Closed

Post a Poll

Topic Closed

my profile | directory | search | faq | forum home

Jump to new posts

Previous Next

» Hello, Victor Hong  [log out ]

Mark Squires' BB on eRobertParker.com » Active Forums » WINE TALK » Retail, wholesale, and website practices. (Page 4)

UBBFriend: Email this page to someone!

This topic is comprised of pages: 1 2 3 4

Author

Topic: Retail, wholesale, and website practices.

EWineExpert
Oenophile
Member # 6391

posted February 04, 2005 09:22 AM

quote:

Originally posted by David Kolin:

quote:

Originally posted by Victor Hong:

quote:

Originally posted by EWineExpert:
Victor : I do work with wine & ecommerce sites, but that said, my comments are only from a very professional ebusiness standpoint, and not to be taken as being biased towards any business. However, I am not a member of any of these insitutions.

Rick : One should complain unfair business practices, if necessary, but as I mentioned before, one must weigh both sides before reaching conclusions.

Which notable wine retailers might be your e-commerce clients? Thanks.

Loading Dock Wines in Milford, CT, according to his website

So, yes, David. You want others on forums to scan your public records, find out where you work, contact your manager, where you live, ... blah blah ? I am glad you served a productive role as Sherlock, but, please be aware that any external activity, such as contacting clients of the firm, etc - can and will have consequences.

If you're so willing, please let me know, and we can both get our attorneys involved in finding out who's been right. My messages here, you'll notice, does not relate to background checks of the members - but is limited to the topic in discussion.

-----
Raj Dasgupta

- Your ECommerce Wine Advisor
- Successful strategies for your ebusiness, everyday.
- <http://www.restoremagic.com>

---

From: CT, US | Registered: Dec 2004 | IP: Logged |  Report Post

Victor Hong

Senior Executive
Oenophile
Member # 310

 posted February 04, 2005 09:26 AM

quote:

---

Originally posted by EWineExpert:

quote:

---

Originally posted by David Kolin:

quote:

---

Originally posted by Victor Hong:

quote:

---

Originally posted by EWineExpert:

Victor : I do work with wine & ecommerce sites, but that said, my comments are only from a very professional ebusiness standpoint, and not to be taken as being biased towards any business. However, I am not a member of any of these insitutions.

Rick : One should complain unfair business practices, if necessary, but as I mentioned before, one must weigh both sides before reaching conclusions.

---

Which notable wine retailers might be your e-commerce clients? Thanks.

---

Loading Dock Wines in Milford, CT, according to his website

---

So, yes, David. You want others on forums to scan your public records, find out where you work, contact your manager, where you live, ... blah blah ? I am glad you served a productive role as Sherlock, but, please be aware that any external activity, such as contacting clients of the firm, etc - can and will have consequences.

If you're so willing, please let me know, and we can both get our attorneys involved in finding out who's been right. My messages here, you'll notice, does not relate to background checks of the members - but is limited to the topic in discussion.

---

That sounds familiar.

-----
"WineHunter."

---

From: Noo Yawk | Registered: Apr 2000 | IP: Logged |  Report Post

EWineExpert
Oenophile
Member # 6391

 posted February 04, 2005 09:28 AM

-----
Raj Dasgupta

- Your ECommerce Wine Advisor
- Successful strategies for your ebusiness, everyday.
- <http://www.restoremagic.com>

---

From: CT, US | Registered: Dec 2004 | IP: Logged |  Report Post

David Kolin

Executive
Oenophile
Member # 5032

 posted February 04, 2005 09:28 AM

quote:

---

Originally posted by EWineExpert:

quote:

---

Originally posted by David Kolin:

quote:

---

Originally posted by Victor Hong:

quote:

---

Originally posted by EWineExpert:
Victor : I do work with wine & ecommerce sites, but that said, my comments are only from a very professional ebusiness standpoint, and not to be taken as being biased towards any business. However, I am not a member of any of these insitutions.

Rick : One should complain unfair business practices, if necessary, but as I mentioned before, one must weigh both sides before reaching conclusions.

---

Which notable wine retailers might be your e-commerce clients? Thanks.

---

Loading Dock Wines in Milford, CT, according to his website

---

So, yes, David. You want others on forums to scan your public records, find out where you work, contact your manager, where you live, ... blah blah ? I am glad you served a productive role as Sherlock, but, please be aware that any external activity, such as contacting clients of the firm, etc - can and will have consequences.

If you're so willing, please let me know, and we can both get our attorneys involved in finding out who's been right. My messages here, you'll notice, does not relate to background checks of the members - but is limited to the topic in discussion.

---

Raj:

Sorry, but I'm getting a bit tired of your sanctimonious nonsense. This information is on a website that you created and linked to in your postings, which I reviewed because I was interested in your background that you bragged on - no Sherlock required. Your threats aren't credible and, frankly, your posts are becoming less so.

David

-----
Pull the cork already

---

From: Chicago | Registered: Jun 2004 | IP: Logged |  Report Post

EWineExpert
Oenophile
Member # 6391

 posted February 04, 2005 09:32 AM

David :

I didn't ask for your feedback. I am tired of your Sherlock-iness as well. I didn't ask you about your personal life or your personal/business endeavours.

Besides, the site you visited, and the one in my signature, is not my actual place of work, just an FYI. (See post on the F10 ebusiness sites).

Anyway, this is going nowhere, I do not have any qualms against you, let us wrap this up.

-----
Raj Dasgupta

- Your ECommerce Wine Advisor
- Successful strategies for your ebusiness, everyday.
- <http://www.restoremagic.com>

From: CT, US | Registered: Dec 2004 | IP: Logged |  Report Post

David Kolin

Executive
Oenophile
Member # 5032

 posted February 04, 2005 09:38 AM

Done

-----
Pull the cork already

From: Chicago | Registered: Jun 2004 | IP: Logged |  Report Post

Mark Squires

Administrator
Member # 89

 posted February 04, 2005 10:25 AM

Very done.

And Raj--please don't post on this site again without emailing me and disclosing for general publication specifically whether you've done any work for stores in question; whether you know A. Saha; and whether you have any other connections, personal or professional, with those stores or Saha.

From: Philadelphia, USA | Registered: Jan 2000 | IP: Logged |  Report Post

Mariano

Senior Executive
Oenophile
Member # 1257

 posted February 04, 2005 10:26 AM

Interesting thread, wonder why I didn't see it earlier.

Several months back a gentleman named Lee Merrill offered a spectacular collection of highly rated wines through the Commerce Corner, at 10-20% below expected auction prices.

I agreed to buy a dozen or so bottles from Mr Merrill via email. Subsequently a heated debate broke out at the Commerce Corner, with certain clever persons assuring me, at times in mockery, that no one on earth had such a wine collection and that Mr Merrill was a scam. Whether they were right, or their rant scared off Mr Merrill I'll probably never know, the fact is that he withdrew the offer and refunded each of us who had sent him money. I never got, however, a refund for my wiring cost so the whole adventure made a dent of around $35 bucks in my wallet.

I did however, act in innocent good faith in assuming that Mr Merrill owned these wines and that he was selling them at reasonable prices to avoid the hassle and commissions associated with an auction.

After reading this thread there is no doubt in my mind that I will not be ordering much wine from Grapes of Connecticut. From the description of events they clearly acted badly, and even worse, perhaps they do this on a regular basis. Unfortunately for them they ran into Victor.

My only question mark is whether the great Winehunter ordered Lafleur at $50 because he thought he might make the best deal of his life (to be later bragged about here), or because he wanted to nail these guys, knowing a deal of this type did not exist. Either way I am on his side.

-----
Mariano Pacheco

"L'impitoyable"

---

From: New York, NY | Registered: May 2002 | IP: Logged |  Report Post

This topic is comprised of pages: 1 2 3 4

 Post New Topic	<input type="button" value="Post a Poll"/>					Previous < > Next
 Topic Closed	 Open Topic	 Feature Topic	 Move Topic	 Delete Topic

 Printer-friendly view of this topic

Hop To:

Contact Us | Forum Home | Privacy Statement

Copyright © 2002-2005, eRobertParker.com, LLC, all rights reserved.

Powered by Infopop Corporation

UBB.classic™ 6.7.1